

A Ghost Story:

This film starts with a couple, C and Linda, talking on the sofa of their house. They are deciding to move to a new house.

The next scene occurs in the new house, a noisy sound comes from the piano of the house. That is weird because this happens in the middle of the night and nobody were up. C and Linda go to check what is going on but they can't find anything wrong. The following day, Linda suggests C move and then she tells to him about something that she got used to do when she moves to a new house, that is putting a note hidden in the house. She writes what she wants to read if she comes back there.

Sadly, C has an accident and he dies in his car. After that Linda goes to the hospital to recognize the body and she sees C covered with a blanket. When she leaves, C stands up still covered with the blanket. He walks around the hospital but no one notices him. He knows that he is death, although he decides to go to his house instead of going to the sky.

When he is there, he sees her girlfriend suffering for her lost. He can't make anything though. He can only stare what is happening. After a while, he sees her girlfriend with a man kissing in front of the door and gets crazy. He makes himself notice moving throwing books out of their bookcase. Linda really gets scared and decides to move. When she is leaving, she leaves a note inside a wall of the house. C tries to grab it, but when he almost does it, two kids enter to the house and start running around.

Effectively, a new family is living in the house now; a Spanish speakers' family. C passes their time staring at them and sees them having their everyday life, although one day he decides to wake up the children moving the door handle of their room and opening it. Maybe he wants himself to be notice again. If that wasn't enough, one day when the family is eating, he starts to throw plates, cups and glasses to the floor. Logically, that family leaves the house being the house empty again.

C finds out that there is another ghost living in next door and their greet.

In another scene, the new owners of the house are having a party at home. A man starts to make a speech saying that every human being wants to be remembered. However, In the end everything that we do is going to be vanish and forgotten. C is listening very carefully to the words of that man.

In the next scene, C is trying again to read the note, but when he almost does it the house is starting to be demolished and he loses track of the note.

I wrote more of what I expected. If you want to know more about what happens in the film, see it.
