

Ruby and Stan need to pay for the operation of her daughter, but they don't have the money and Ruby says to Stan that people from work will help them, but there isn't any help, the girls decide to rob the shop again instead.

They decide to rob the shop again because of two reasons. Firsts, because Ruby needs the money and second, they can leave a card telling that they are doing laundry money there and put Rio out of the game. When they are there, an employee pushes a panic button so the police is going to come. Annie takes enough money for the surgery and put a card inside the strongbox writing agent Turner on the front of the card while the girls are with the hostages. Ruby and Beth see the police coming and they take off their mask and act like if they are a hostage. Annie is not as safe as them because although she is with the job's clothes, Tyler, the security employee, sees her with the money attached to her tommy.

At the end, Beth and Ruby leaves the shop safe and Tyler doesn't tell the cops what he knows.

In another scene, Mary hears the microphone that boomer put inside her house. She thinks that Boomer works at FBI and goes to Beth's house to tell her. She shows Beth a photo of him and Beth tells her all that happened between them. That night after the rob, Boomer goes to Mary's house because he is really mad and wants to be with her but when he comes in Mary starts talking about that he tried to rape Annie. Boomer tries to excuse himself saying that Annie wanted it, that she is not a good Christian. Even the speech, Mary doesn't believe him and takes the bible telling him that she is recording all. Boomer leaves the house angrier than when he came.

That Wednesday is Beth's and Dean's anniversary and Dean invites her to go to a restaurant. When Dean is going home, he crashes the car and they take him to the hospital. Beth goes and discovers the cancer's lie. Despite this sad moment, there is one worse scene. Stan realizes that Ruby robbed the shop.

A few days later, the police captures Rio, but one night he appears at Beth's house and threatens her though.
