

After doctor's suicide, Harry and Heather try to find more information about him. They find the name of a girl that sued the doctor for bad practice. When they search where she is living, Harry recognizes that her direction is the direction of a headshrinker and that is the same than the one where his mother was. They decide to visit her but being careful with what to believe about what she says and what not. After all, she is crazy.

When they are there she tells them that she called him because she wanted to abort. He did it taking away all her uterus (harsh indeed). She tells also that she was living in Mosswood. When that happens Heather's and Harry's eyes sparkle and they start to ask more questions like if she knows Marin and if she knows where she is. She says that they should look in the lake without specifying any more. Before they leave, Harry shows her a photo of a man and she asks if she can have it. When Harry responds negatively to her question, she starts to shout and the staff of the place take to her room. Who can be that man and why is so important to her...?

Vera goes to visit Julian but he doesn't look pretty well. He says that he is having that nightmare. He also asks her when he is going to be able to go home and Vera can't say anything because she doesn't know if he'll live after all. She invites Harry to spend a few days in Mosswood. He goes because wants to see their rituals. When they are there, they wander in the woods but suddenly Harry falls over and loses track of Vera. After a lot of hours walking around the forest he finds a cottage and goes in. Vera is waiting for him inside. In the house there is a big painting with the same man that he showed to the girl in the headshrinker. He asks Vera who is he and she tells him that he is their leader. He used to live in Mosswood and they talk about his books. After dinner Harry wants to leave but Vera insists him to stay. She tries to seduce him.
