

The Fifth Element

The first scene occurs in Egypt in 1913, an old man and his partner are trying to decipher the meaning of a stone that is inside an Egypt temple. A priest in charge of the place is worried because it seems they are discovering too much. Suddenly, a spaceship lands and many aliens go directly to the stone. They tell the priest, who knows their language, that the stones must be moved; the war is coming and that place is not safe anymore. Finally, they leave telling him that he has to pass his knowledge for 300 years.

After 300 years, a cluster of humans' spaceships are gathered because an amusing big ball similar to a sun appeared and they want to destroy it. Sadly, when they shoot it, it gets bigger; it seems impossible to deal with it. Luckily, a priest is on the ship. He explains that the Mondoshawam race knew that the ball was coming long time ago and they have the answer. Not so luckily, Mondoshawam's ship is destroyed by a group of bounty hunters.

The only thing still useful in the ship after the attack is an arm (because the technology of those years is capable of giving a human body to the owner of that arm). The best thing is: they have their memories untouched. Leeloo, the rescued Mondoshawam, escapes a few moments after she wakes up.

Leeloo falls into a taxi when she is escaping from the police. The driver is Mr. Dallas an ex-space fighter who now makes a living by driving a cab. He decides to help her, although they can't communicate very well since they speak different languages. She explains to him that she is looking for a priest so they search him.

In the next scene, they show Mr. Zerg, the one who paid for the bounty hunters. He is working with the big ball—who is surprisingly alive—in order to destroy all living creatures. Mr. Zerg's personal objective is to get hold of the stones.

Leeloo, Mr. Dallas, and the priest have to go to a planet far away where the stones are being looked after, whereas the big ball is starting to travel directly towards the earth; using the stones is the only way to stop the big ball. After a lot of problems related to aliens with guns and bombs, they achieve their goal and come back to the earth with the stones. In spite of having the stones and killing Mr Zerg, they still have to activate the powers of the stones and that must be made in the Egypt temple. Inside it, they discover that the stones represent the fourth elements and they have to be turn up using their element. A lightning bolt goes directly from Leeloo's mouth to the center of the ball and it is destroyed.

At the end everyone, that is still alive, is safe and the universe has been saved.
